Additionally, ugly laws were sparked by the Panic of 1893. These included Columbus, Ohio in 1894, and in 1891 for the entire state of Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania's was different as it contained language applying to cognitive disability as well as physical disability. An attempt was made at introducing ugly laws in New York, but it failed in 1895. Initial drafts in New York were similar to those in Pennsylvania as to include cognitive disabilities.

Ugly law - Wikipedia

"Ugly laws" refer to a series of anti-begging laws passed in US cities like SF in the 19th/20th centuries prohibiting people "deformed or mutilated in such a manner as to be a disgusting object" from "display [ing] themselves to public view." Sometimes these laws explicitly forbade "extremely unattractive" people f
